Q) I have a student in class who told me he/she has a disability, but has not requested accommodations that I know of. Am I still responsible for accommodations?

A) No, you are only responsible for reasonable accommodations if requested. If the student has not had you sign the accommodations form from the DSPS office, you may want to encourage them privately to go to the DSPS office to join the program and get reasonable accommodations.