Q) What are some of the types of test accommodations available to students with disabilities?

A) Test accommodations are authorized by the DSPS director/counselor or designee based upon the student’s functional limitations and the documentation of the disability. Some of the testing accommodations include but are not limited to: extra time for a test (often time and a half), a reader or scribe (a person who writes answers verbatim), a computer, Braille exam, enlarged exam, digitalized exam allowing for dictation software), and minimal distraction space.
